FOUR INJURED IN MISHAP

Two cars collided nearly head on along the Hearts Content road Sunday injuring four. A Greensburg youth was admitted to Warren General Hospital and was listed in satisfactory condition. The others were treated and released. The accident occurred just before 2 p.m. Trooper Paul W. Brown investigates for the state police and passersby gather to see what happened. See story on page 2. Widow Pleads For Return Of Head

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — In a small cemetery far from this village, the body of Pancho Villa lies headless in a grave without a cross.

In Chihuahua, 45 years after his death, Villa's widow lives with a wish: that the villain who severed her husband's head a year after his death will return it.

Then Mrs. Luz Corral de Villa, 75, hopes the Mexican government will move Villa's body 150 miles from Hidalgo del Paraiso to the mausoleum at Chihuahua which he built as his own crypt.

"I know someone has the head," says Mrs. Villa. "It was cut from Pancho Villa's body as a stroke of revenge. But now all this is history. It would be nice if it were returned."

The famed revolutionary, who helped overthrow several Mexican dictators, was gunned down as he rode in his car in 1923. His body was riddled with 47 bullets. The assailants never were found.

"He was killed the same way as President Kennedy," says Mrs. Villa. "Cut down as he drove in his car. Presidents Lincoln and Kennedy and Jesus Christ were all killed on the same day of the week as my husband—Friday—and for the same reason—their ideals."

Considered a rebel and a bandit when he died, Villa was ignored by the Mexican government until recent years when he was proclaimed a national hero and monuments were built to him.

Chihuahua now has a Pancho Villa Park built around the ornate mausoleum Villa meant for himself. Although many Mexican presidents have promised to move the body there, none has. "The government keeps stalling. It always has," says Mrs. Villa. "Now that Mexico is finally recognizing my husband as a national hero, I think the country would let his body be buried where he always wanted it."

The plump, white-haired widow lives alone in Villa's 50-room mansion surrounded by memorabilia of the dashing rebel who married her when she was 18 and he 33.

Pancho met the blonde, blue-eyed beauty, Luz Corral, in 1911.

McNamara Effort for RFK Brings Demand He Resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert S. McNamara prompted a demand Sunday that he resign as he broke the nonpolitical tradition of his World Bank presidency to promote presidential hopeful Robert F. Kennedy.

The demand came from Sen. Thurston B. Morton, R-Ky., after Kennedy campaign headquarters released the text of a television tape in which the former secretary of defense praised Kennedy's role in the 1962 Cuban crisis.

Although McNamara did not give Kennedy an outright endorsement, he used such words as "energy, courage, compassion and wisdom" in describing the part played by the New York Democratic senator, who then was attorney general under his late brother President John F. Kennedy.

"It was indiscreet at best for a public official dealing in delicate international finance in a period of grave dollar crisis to allow himself to be crassly used in a domestic political campaign," Morton said.

Morton, prime mover in efforts to get New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller actively into the Republican race, accused Kennedy of "ruthless and tasteless use of personal friendship, at perhaps dreadful loss to" McNamara.

McNamara declined comment. Although no stranger to controversy during his eight innovative years as defense secretary, he has refused public comment on domestic and international issues since stepping into the World Bank presidency two weeks ago.

Tax Returns Must Be Postmarked by Midnight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service estimates that more than five million Americans are waiting until the last day—Monday—to file their income tax returns for 1967.

Monday at midnight is the deadline but persons affected by last week's racial violence—including policemen, firemen and National Guardsmen who worked long hours to restore order—can take more time if they need it.

To meet the legal deadline, returns must be postmarked by midnight Monday.

The Service is stretching its rules in cases where persons lost records or saw them destroyed in the recent racial violence or were prevented from obtaining tax help because of curfews or conditions relating to the disturbances. These returns must be filed as quickly as possible and accompanied by a letter detailing circumstances and reasons for the delay. IRS said it won't assess in these cases the usual penalty for late filing—5 per cent per month of the taxes still owed up to a maximum of 25 per cent. The interest charge fixed by law of one half of one per cent monthly of the taxes due must still be paid, however.

About 18 million taxpayers waited until the final three days to file their returns, IRS said. Three out of every four returns were filed earlier.

Failure to file any return when it's required could result in criminal prosecution which, upon conviction, carries a maximum penalty of up to one year in jail and a $10,000 fine.

All Fires Banned In Glade Twp.

Glade Township supervisors have banned all fires until further notice. According to supervisor Gerry Archibald, extremely dry conditions and high winds during the weekend caused firemen many anxious moments.

Leftists Clash With Police In W. Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Thousands of leftist demonstrators clashed violently with hundreds of police Sunday on West Berlin's swank Kurfuerstendamm.

The battle threw into chaos the traditional Easter Sunday parade of strolling tourists and Berliners.

It was the fourth straight day of violence in the city since Holy Thursday, when student leader Red Rudi Dutschke was shot and critically wounded by a lone gunman on the same street.

The massed demonstrators, carrying red flags and placards, and in one case a cross, grudgingly gave ground as a solid phalanx of police on foot advanced slowly up the street.

They were backed up by mounted officers.

Water cannon poured thousands of gallons of water point-blank at demonstrators who huddled together rather than retreat.

Only when police advanced with clubs swinging did the demonstrators back up. They struck back with the sticks of their signs as they retreated.

At least one patrolman was knocked down and beaten as he moved too far in front of his fellows.

Missiles flew from the ranks of the demonstrators — stones, pieces of metal, fruit, firecrackers, paint. They tried to pile barriers across the street.

It was the most intensive clash between demonstrators and West Berlin police since a riot during a demonstration against the Shah of Iran last year.

The demonstrators had massed for a rally at a downtown square, and then moved along the Kurfuerstendamm, Berlin's main street.

As the police advanced, the demonstrators chanted "Nazis, Nazis, Nazis." They also yelled "Ho-Ho-Ho-Chi Minh," and "Rudi Dutschke."

At least three construction trucks were tipped over in the middle of the boulevard during the three-hour melee and police said 37 persons were arrested, though some were quickly released.

A small group of counter-demonstrators stood on the sidewalks and cheered the police.

Dutschke was reported making satisfactory progress. Doctors said the 28-year-old student leader has no fever, his circulation is normal and he is able to answer "simple questions" and can move his limbs.

Their is one of three planes criss-crossing Pennsylvania under the sponsorship of the Committee for Five Yes Votes. Accompanying Broderick and Michener will be John C. Jordan, Republican state chairman, and Louise John, Democratic state vice chairman.

Weekend Fires Plague Firemen; Vacant House Burns to Ground

A vacant house on Cornplanter rd., off the Roper Hollow rd., burned to the ground Sunday-morning of a dozen fires which plagued firemen throughout the county over the weekend.

Russell Fire Chief Howard Jones said the fire spread and burned about five acres of forest land. He said a blaze broke out in trees about a quarter of a mile from the house and firemen had to fight two fires at once. About 30 men from Russell and 15 from Scandia were on the scene. The alarm was turned in by a nearby resident.

The cause of the fire was unknown and no estimate was placed on the loss. The owner was not immediately determined but it was believed the two story frame building was owned by someone named Culbertson.

Most of the other fires were of the grass and brush variety. Tidoute extinguished two blazes, one a mutual aid response to Tionesta which received three alarms simultaneously. Grass fires were also extinguished by firemen from Lander, Sheffield, North Warren and Clarendon which also had two blazes.

Warren firemen extinguished a rubbish fire on Third ave. Sunday afternoon and Saturday extinguished a fire that caused $200 damage to a car near Marino's Diner. The auto was owned by Elton Duane Grubbs, 66 Railroad st., Clarendon. It was valued at $300.

Clinic Series Set to Help Soap Box Derby Racers

A series of clinics run by experts and designed to assist Warren County boys in building their Soap Box Derby racers was announced today by Vic Miller and Nick Petchel, directors of the coaching program here.

Miller and Petchel said the first clinic, at K of C Hall on 2nd ave., will be held April 16 at 7:00 p.m. It will include an interpretation of the latest official rules and basic procedures for building a car.

"The clinics will be conducted by former Derby contestants, members of the inspection team and other technical people," the directors said.

"Further sessions will feature step-by-step building of a car. Entrants will have a chance to cover specific problems they are having in their car-building effort."

Sessions outlining recommended design and construction methods also will be shown. Boys entered in the 1968 Warren County race are urged to participate in the clinics. Contestants' parents and friends are welcome.

The directors also said that Tuesday 7:00 would be the deadline to sign up for the Derby. Any one who still wants to enter the Warren County Derby must go to Dan's Chevrolet before that time.

This season marks the 31st year of Soap Box Derby competition, started in 1934 and now an internationally recognized racing program for boys. More than 50,000 youngsters are expected to compete in races throughout the United States and in several foreign countries.

Each local champion receives from national sponsor Chevrolet a handsome trophy and $300 savings bond. Local winners qualify for the All-American finals in Akron, Ohio, where they race for $30,000 in college scholarships.

British Papers View Riots With Alarm

LONDON (AP)—Two British newspapers viewed the student rioting in West Germany with alarm and foreboding Sunday.

The liberal Observer, in big black type over three columns on its front page, said: "Students bring Germany to brink of seige."

The story referred to "a panic-stricken Bonn," "a political crisis on a scale unknown since the Thirties" and "the beginning of open revolutionary struggle."

The conservative Sunday Telegraph warned: "Student riots spell danger for Germany."

Telegraph writer Peregrine Worsthorne said the shooting of student leader Rudi Dutschke, 28, "casts a baleful shadow over Europe." Such a collapse of order, he said, brought the death of the Weimar Republic and the Nazi dictatorship.

"It could mark the beginning of another bout of brutal violence which in turn might disrupt the Federal Republic whose roots are scarcely firmer, in spite of affluence, than those of its Weimar predecessor," the British commentator declared.

Soviet Launches New Earth Satellite

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union launched a new earth satellite Sunday as part of its unmanned Cosmos series. It went into an orbit similar to that of the last Soviet manned mission a year ago.

An official announcement of the launching of Cosmos 212 kept to past policy in not specifying its mission other than "continuation of space exploration and testing of new systems and elements of the design of spacecraft."

The similarity of its orbit to that of the Soyuz 1, a new craft which crashed and killed a cosmonaut aboard last April 24, suggested the new Cosmos might be an unmanned dry run

Two Killed In Fiery Crash Near Ridgway

RIDGWAY, Pa. (AP)—A teenage boy and a girl died Sunday from injuries suffered when a car and a camper slammed together and caught fire. Five others were hurt.

Thomas Baker, 19, of St. Marys died in Erie's St. Vincent Hospital, Pamela Dowell, 10, of East Cleveland, Ohio, died in Elk County Memorial Hospital.

Ronald Feldbauer, 23, of St. Marys, driver of the car in which Baker was riding, was listed as critical in Elk County Memorial Hospital. Also hospitalized were Pamela's parents, James 33, and Daisy, 39, and her brothers, James Jr., 35, and George 1.

Her stepbrother, Robert E. Rickard, 16, was driving the family's camper to visit with relatives in Cherry Tree, Indiana County. Rickard wasn't hurt.

State police said Feldbauer pulled his car off U.S. 219 near Ridgway Saturday to avoid a collision with an oncoming passing car. Police said Feldbauer lost control and his car shot across the highway into the path of the camper.

Four Weekend Mishaps Result in Injuries

State police reported four accidents over the weekend. All of them involved bodily injury.

Four young people were hurt Sunday afternoon when two cars collided almost head-on on Hearts Content rd., 12 miles south of Warren. Admitted to Warren General Hospital in satisfactory condition was Dannie Thorpe, 17, 1703 Ekman st., Greensburg, a passenger in a car driven by Keith Frank Keefer, 18, 100 Elkhorn rd., Monaca. Keefer's brother, George, 20, suffered minor cuts and bruises as did the driver of the second car, Perry Lee Spencer, 17, RD 1, Tidoute, and his passenger, Diane Hulings, 16, Tidoute. They were treated at the hospital and released.

Earlier Sunday Kimberly A. Porter, 4, daughter of James T. Porter, 751 Jackson Run rd., ran across the road into the left rear of a car operated by Lyle G. Cathcart, 36, Masons Mobile City, troopers said. The child was treated for a head cut at Warren General Hospital and released.

Thomas Lee Radecki, Box 125, Garland, attempted to slow down behind a car on Rt. 27 in Sugar Grove twp, Saturday night and skidded off the road striking a sign and guard rails, troopers said. Radecki and a passenger, Craig E. Dinimny, 19, 22 Ninth st., Youngsville, suffered lacerations. Dinimny was admitted to Warren General Hospital where he is listed in satisfactory condition.

Floyd G. Russell, 51, 1665 Market st., ext., suffered a cut lip but was not treated after his car ran into a telephone pole along Rt. 6 east of Clarendon Saturday morning. Russell had cut himself while fishing and was driving home to treat the wound when he passed out, state police reported.

Concert Association Slates Annual Membership Drive

Warren County residents will be able to join the 1968-69 concert association between April 15 and 26, according to Mrs. Robert Sokolowski, general chairman.

The campaign will kick-off on Thursday evening when volunteer workers will meet for dessert at 8 p.m. in the YMCA second floor dining room and receive their kits and special instructions.

Two of the four concerts have been announced; they are the Norman Luboff Choir and the Princeton Chamber Orchestra with Janice Harsanyias soloist. The booking of the other two events will depend on the outcome of the membership drive.

In the past few weeks, several hundred persons have renewed their memberships by mail and Mrs. Sokolowski urges that many more do so this week so that they will not have to receive a personal call during the campaign.

The memberships are $8.50 for adults and $4.50 for students through high school level and patron memberships of $50 and $25 are also available and especially appreciated.

The chairman reminded that no single admission tickets are ever sold to the concert series and that no memberships are sold after the end of the drive. This year the campaign is being held in the spring rather than in the fall when it is more difficult to obtain the best artists bookings.

The following are some of the volunteers who will enter members starting on the 18th: Miss Christine Hurd, Mrs. Frances Bartholomew, Miss Sunny Lucia, Mrs. Arthur Lydell, Mrs. Fred Beyer, Mrs. Donald Dumond, Mrs. Ben Hofer, Mrs. Alfred Hulse, Mrs. Chester Coleman, Mrs. Howard Ryberg, Mrs. Gladys Barrett, Mrs. Louis Blacchi, Mrs. James Gorenflo, Mrs. Joseph DeMott, Mrs. Mark Ervin, Mrs. Robert Balleau, Mrs. William Porter, Mrs. Frank Happ, Mrs. E.M. Deputies of the Chautauque County Sheriff's Department said the Sutton vehicle struck the rear of a car operated by David P. Hummerich, 12 Park st., North Warren, while both vehicles were traveling south on Rt. 60. The accident occurred at 1:40 a.m. Sunday. The North Warren motorist received leg and nose injuries but required no hospital treatment. Eye witnesses told sheriff's deputies the Sutton auto was traveling at a high rate of speed before it rammed into the rear of the Hummerich auto.

County Physicians Offer Post Graduate Seminar

Viral diseases, which make up more than half of the infectious diseases of modern man, will be the subject of a seminar at the Warren County Academy of General Practice meeting on Saturday, April 27.

The all-day post-graduate seminar will be held at the Kof C building and attended by physicians from a wide area of Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio. A faculty of six visiting physicians will be heard during the day with Dr. Ross E. Bryan as moderator in the morning sessions and Dr. Joseph C. Mull as moderator in the afternoon.

The communicable disease section of the seminar will be presented through the seminar services program of the U.S. Public Health Service's National Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia. Speakers will include Dr. Ben Vaughan Branscomb, professor of medicine, University of Alabama Medical College, Dr. William Dismukes, chief, Hepatitis Unit, National Communicable Disease Center and Dr. Eli Gold, associate professor of pediatrics and microbiology Western Reserve University School of Medicine.

The viral infections of man represent the last great unconquered area of infectious diseases, according to Surgeon General William H. Stewart of the U.S. Public Health Service. This is true, Dr. Stewart said, despite recent breakthroughs such as the development of polio and measles vaccines. The virus is the smallest and most elusive enemy of mankind and may also be the toughest, he said.

Other members of the faculty for the local seminar include Dr. Alberto Miyara, chief, medical services, Clarendon General Hospital, Clarendon, New Hampshire, Dr. Harold D. Iles-

News Around The World

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP)—More than 200 police and volunteers searched Wellington harbor's rocky coastline Sunday for the bodies of 11 persons still listed as missing in the capsizing of the ferry Wahine.

Forty-eight persons are listed as dead in the Wahine disaster but authorities said conflicting reports have made it impossible to compile complete accurate list.

The storms that drove the Wahine onto a shoal at the harbor mouth and lashed its lifeboats and rafts continued to batter parts of New Zealand. Floods ripped through Wyndham and Maitara on South Island forcing hundreds of per-JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—About two tons of silver bars have been found in a closet of a mosque at the Merdeka Palace compound here, informed sources said Sunday. They said the treasure might have been hidden by deposed former President Sukarno.

The sources said one of Sukarno's former secretaries, who had keys to the closet, revealed the hoard to authorities. Sukarno is living in enforced retirement about 30 miles from Jakarta.

PARIS (AP)—A strike by flight mechanics forced Air France to cancel 76 of its 80 scheduled flights Sunday, leaving thousands of holiday travelers without air transportation.

Easter weekend is one of the busiest of the year for the airline, with regular and special flights booked to carry some 20,000 passengers. The mechanics' strike began at midnight Saturday and was to last until midnight Monday.

JERUSALEM (AP)—A Soviet journalist was denied permission to visit Israel because his "anti-Israeli writings" showed he was coming "with hostile intent," the Foreign Ministry announced Sunday.

Anatoli Agarychev, deputy editor of the Communist youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, was to have attended a youth conference of Rakah, Israel's Moscow-oriented Communist party.

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Frogs trapped on the hull of a tugboat that sank here Saturday and were surprised to hear answering taps from within. They freed two crewmen who had been submerged more than five hours, kept alive by a trapped air pocket.

The two, the tug's engineer and machinist, had been given up for dead when the tug Patro Mor Arango capsized and sank after its towline to a freighter snapped during mooring operations.

Easter 1968 Heralds Season of Hope in World Torn by Strife

Echoes Of Tragedy Sounded

Easter 1968 heralded a season of hope in a world torn by strife between nations and among men.

In Rome Sunday, a drawn but vibrant Pope prayed that peace efforts succeed in Vietnam — "that distant region of Asia where it seems the war can never end."

Worshippers in Prague, Czechoslovakia, heard a bishop express hope for restoration of religious freedom so that the nation's "silent church" might see an end to its "dark Easter feasts."

In the once-divided Holy City of Jerusalem, pilgrims of many faiths and nations worshipped in a jubilant atmosphere.

Americans donned their spring season-greeting finery and in New York a happy and tranquil throng milled on Fifth Avenue beneath church bells and a dazzling sun.

President Johnson heard a prayer for nonviolence and the hope that his countrymen of every race and religion live in peace and harmony.

But bitterness, and the echoes of recent tragedy also sounded. At Khe Sanh in Vietnam, a wounded Seabee waiting to be lifted from the seared battlefield said: "I am glad to be getting out of this place. That is what happy Easter means."

A Marine put in: "I celebrated by jumping into a hole."

The base came under mortar and rocket fire from the Communists two minutes after a helicopter landed with six thousand Easter eggs for the garrison.

In Berlin, left-wing demonstrators clashed with police for the fourth day in a row and broke up the traditional Easter strollers and paraders.

Once again, the dwellers in one-half of the divided city were prevented from seeing relatives and friends in the other half. Communist East German authorities have refused to discuss a holiday pass agreement. Visiting between the East and West Berliners has not been permitted since Whit Sunday in 1966, nearly two years ago.

In England, the Archbishop of Canterbury said in his Easter message: "To exclude from Christian fellowship a person of another race or another color might be to exclude the presence of Jesus Himself."

Meanwhile, in Oxford, England, 400 persons marched through the university town in a memorial to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Pope Paul VI, in his Vatican message, said King's slaying was a "warning episode," and he pleaded that "racism, nationalism, class hatred and the domination of privileged peoples over the weaker" come to an end.

There was gunfire in the Holy Land when Israeli and Jordanian troops clashed along the Jordan River.

In Jerusalem, however, no incidents were reported as clergymen, pilgrims and tourists attended services celebrating the resurrection of Christ.

For the Greek Orthodox, Armenian, Syrian and Coptic churches, this was Palm Sunday. Their Easter comes next week.

Mrs. Kennedy celebrated Easter in Palm Beach, Fla. The widow of President John F. Kennedy attended church wearing a pink beige dress and matching mantilla. She was accompanied by her son, John Jr., and daughter, Caroline, who wore a blue dress.

President Johnson attended services at St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic church in Stonewall, Tex., near his LBJ ranch where he was spending the holiday.

His daughter, Luci Nugent, and his 9-month-old grandson, Lyn, accompanied the President.

The first family later attended a service at the St. Barnabas Episcopal church in Fredericksburg, Tex.

Fifth Avenue Parade Draws Happy Throngs

NEW YORK (AP) — A happy throng strolled in dazzling sunlight on Fifth Avenue Sunday in an Easter parade of outlandish finery and domestic tranquility.

There were girls in mini-skirts, ladies smothered in flowers, children in spanking new outfits, dogs in ribbons, men in top hats and turbans, and families in smiles.

Up in Central Park, several thousand Yippies gathered in hair, flowers, bells, heads and wild costumery for what they billed as their first annual "yip-out." Police in dark blue watched from behind rocks.

The balmy air over Fifth Avenue was filled with the sound of church bells, hymns and prayers broadcast from St. Patrick's Cathedral, and the snap of camera shutters.

6,000 Easter Eggs Arrive By Chopper at Khe Sanh

KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — Six thousand Easter eggs arrived by helicopter at Khe Sanh this foggy Sunday morning. Two minutes later six mortar and rocket rounds exploded on the air strip, wounding three Marines.

"They told us there were Easter eggs on the strip," said Marine Pfc. Frank Faur, Easton, Pa. "I went to check them out and then those rounds started coming in. They say the seige of Khe Sanh is over. Who are they trying to kid?"

This was Easter at Khe Sanh. Religious services were held at the base early in the morning, but the men in the field, outside the barbed wire perimeter, had no time for organized prayer.

Five miles away, on Hill 881 North, units of the 326th Marine Regiment were fighting an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese soldiers in a bitter struggle to take the hill. Contact continued all day.

More than a dozen dirty men with bandaged hands, heads and feet came limping off the choppers from Hill 881 to await evacuation to the medical station at Dong Ha. They had missed the incoming rounds by only a few seconds.

The sun finally broke through the thick clouds and the uneasiness brought on by the morning attack diminished. Billows of red dust from Jeeps and trucks covered the Marines as they worked near their bunkers, packing their gear.

The Marines have been relieved at Khe Sanh by Army troops of the 1st Air Cavalry Division. The Leathernecks are expected to be gone in three or four days.

"Easter? Yeah, I heard about it on the radio," one Marine said. "I celebrated by jumping into a hole."

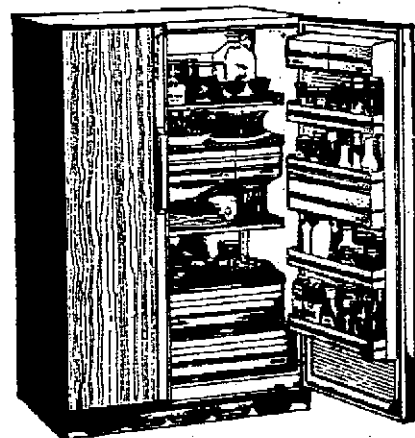

Word spread that Easter eggs were to be flown up from Da Nang and distributed. By mid-afternoon Marines were carrying pink and green tinted eggs in their helmets. Most of the egg shells were cracked. Some eggs were raw inside, but the men didn't seem to mind.

"The last time I had eggs was three months ago," said Cpl. Al Brewster, of Dalhart, Tex. "I can't believe we got them. It's a nice surprise."

Pilgrims Jam Into Holy Land

JERUSALEM (AP) — In carnival atmosphere and searing hot weather, joyous Easter ceremonies were held in this once-divided Holy City Sunday.

Thousands of pilgrims and tourists jammed into the 400-year-old Church of the Holy Sepulchre, reputedly the site of Christ's burial place, and the area around it, to hear several services being conducted at once.

The Latin Catholic Church and several Eastern faiths shared the towering edifice, now under going renovation and scarred by scaffolding and unfinished masonry. For the Greek Orthodox, Armenian, Syrian and Coptic churches this was Palm Sunday. Their Easter is next week.

Camera-clicking tourists, clergymen and monks moved about, recording the first Easter ceremony under Israeli rule since Jerusalem was divided 20 years ago by mines, barbed wire and no-man's land.

No incidents were reported, although the Israeli army and police were alert for possible Arab sabotage attempts in the old walled city.

Violence flared to the north when Israeli and Jordanian troops clashed along the troubled Jordan River in sharp, brief exchanges.

The sun appeared over the Mount of Olives and touched off the jubilation services celebrating the risen Christ. Protestants assembled at sunrise on both sides of Jerusalem, Arab and Jewish.

Two services were conducted at the Garden Tomb, which many Christians believe was the burial place of Christ before Resurrection.

The first, at sunrise, was conducted by the warden of the tomb, J. W. Van Der Hoeven of Baarn, Netherlands; the second by Dr. Ralph Earle, professor of New Testament at the Nazarene Theological Seminary in Kansas City, Mo.

SUNRISE SERVICE

A large crowd attended the Easter Sunrise Service in Harbin Hall at Wesley Woods Methodist Camp on Sunday. The speaker was the Rev. Virgil E. Maybray of Grace Methodist Church of Oil City, Pa. whose topic was "Witnessing to the Resurrection." Miss Helyn Horne of Titusville was organist. Participating in the service were Worship Leader Emory Miles; Rev. David L. Ostrander, Pleasantville

Sub Church and Rev. Dale Livermore, Bethel Methodist Church. Special music was by Ann Vosburgh, Robert Vosburgh, Lance Hummer and Jody Hummer of Bethel Methodist Church. Following the service a breakfast of pancakes and sausage was served to all in McKnight Dining Hall. Boy Scouts of Troop 95, First Methodist Church, Titusville acted as waiters.

Mrs. King Says Husband's Unfinished Work Must Go On

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The widow of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. told an Easter congregation at Ebenezer Baptist Church Sunday that continuing her husband's unfinished work would be the greatest tribute to him.

Mrs. King, wearing a black dress and hat, took the pulpit briefly after Dr. Martin Luther King Sr. had finished a joyful sermon on "The Resurrection." "I know that all of you today feel with me the full meaning of Easter," Mrs. King said.

"In my heart, I feel it is God's will for his work to go on. Our dedication and concern to the task of continuing his unfinished work will be the greatest tribute to my husband, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr."

"But never lose your faith—keep your faith," he said. "You may have come here frustrated this morning, but He (the Lord) stands ready to help. He's such a good and kind Savior, I love Him... I love the Lord... I do."

King spoke of Jesus raising Lazarus from the dead and of how the Lord had to focus the eyes of Martha, Lazarus' sister, on the resurrection.

"Faithless people are as old as the family of man," King said. "This is not a day of death. This is a day of triumph. This is Easter morning, and one of these days all of God's children are going to get up."

Pope Appeals For Peace

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI appealed Easter Day for success in Vietnam peace efforts and an end to "envy and hate" to achieve brotherhood, equality and world peace.

The Pope spoke under a gray and rainy sky to a huge crowd standing in St. Peter's Square under umbrellas.

Although he looked gaunt and tired, his voice rang with the kind of vigor it had before his prostate operation last November.

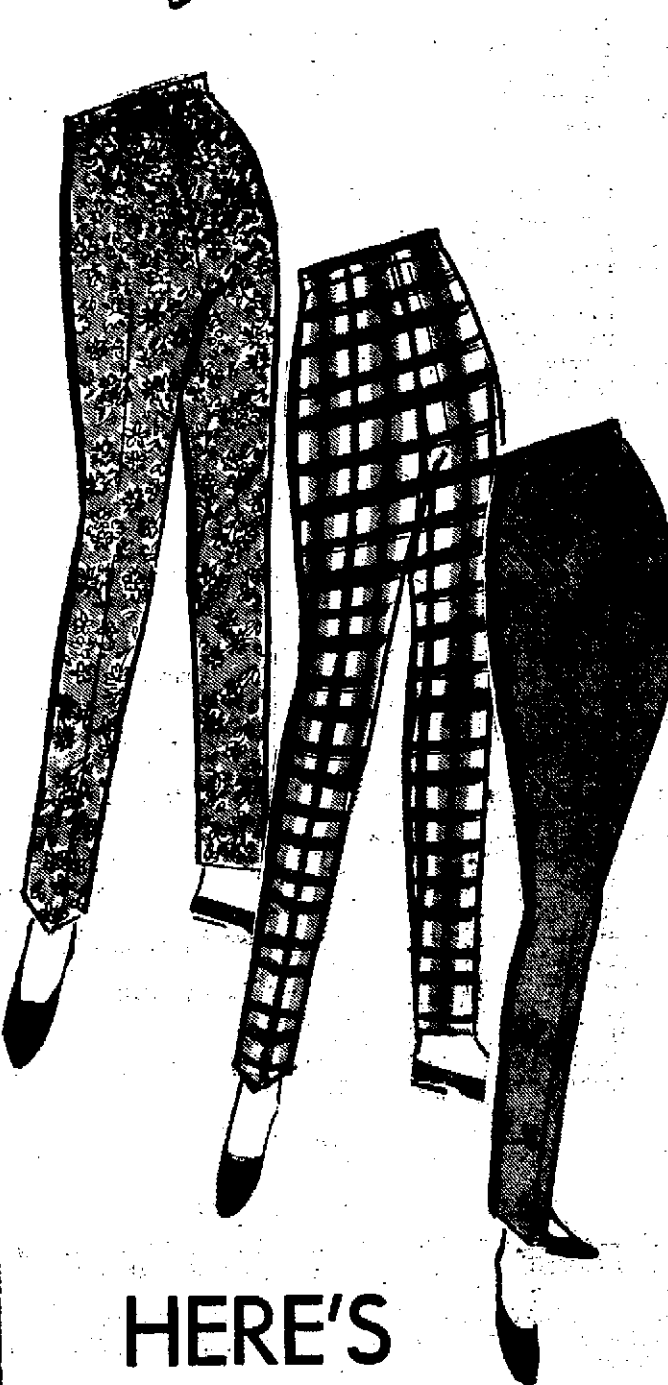

In a 1,000-word address, the pontiff cited the assassination of American civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as a "warning episode" and a "murder which stirred the whole world."

Pope Paul voiced the plea that "racism, nationalism, class hatred and the domination of privileged peoples over the weaker ones" give way to the "courageous and generous adventure of universal love."

The Pope gave his speech after a Mass celebrated outdoors in front of St. Peter's Basilica despite the leaden skies and intermittent rain.

Natural Beauty

As Warren County can easily be classified as one of the last frontiers of natural beauty in the state, a portion of the paper Dr. Durward L. Allen, professor of Wildlife Ecology, Purdue University, presented to the annual conference of the American Association for Conservation Information, should be of interest.

While speaking of the population boom, Dr. Allen said, "It goes almost without saying that the best anyone can do in dampening the population boom will not be soon enough. Meantime a line is to be held: there is a program of quality control to be applied with judgment and courage to the human environment. In North America we have great possessions that will cost us little to keep but much to lose.

"The most perishable amenities of this world are its open spaces and quietudes, its greenery, pure water, natural rivers, wetlands, wildlife and choice scenery, its dwindling modicum of true wilderness. Substantially, these are what President Johnson has characterized as 'natural beauty.' Nationally they are the out-of-doors we use for recreation. Locally they may be the charm of a pleasant countryside or well-groomed city.

"Most of today's universities are centers of technology, rather than philosophical thought. The vast majority of our young people go through school with no exposure to the biological realities of human existence or the natural world. They assume the duties of citizenship with little understanding of feel for the order among living things—a necessary basis for attitudes toward human and resource husbandry.

"Holding or salvaging the most fragile values of our environment has become an emergency issue—because the headlong impetus of our make-work enterprise has no built-in controls. Our history and success has fostered a certain arrogance toward the native wilderness of our homeland. North Americans are commonly so bemused with the charm of bringing straight lines and square corners to the chaos of nature — our bulldozer-kampf—that they have no idea where it should stop. In the resolution of values, man's mastery of the earth will pay him greatest tribute when he achieves the forbearance to leave some of it alone."

In a county or almost unspoiled natural beauty, Dr. Allen's words should have more than cursory meaning. We have as our community heritage a vast area of semi-wilderness that must be protected against radical change if we are ever to realize the most from its potential. And as Dr. Allen points out in another portion of his paper, this beauty can be preserved through the backing in depth by civilian volunteers.

JOSEPH ALSOP

Fighting While Negotiating

DONG HA, South Vietnam—Here at this Marine base on the DMZ, American general officers of every rank and every command daily arrive, usually by squads or platoons. The wiry, tough and wryly funny commander of the 3rd Marine Division, the famed host, Maj. Gen. Rathbone Tompkins, has been heard to murmur just a mite impatiently:

"The stars are falling on Dong Ha."

Khe Sanh brought the generals first. Now it is a desire to see at first hand the whole position in the two most northerly provinces of I Corps, Quang Tri and Thua Thien, where the North Vietnamese and the United States and our allies have concentrated their heaviest weights of fighting power. There is real meaning, too, in all this to-and-froing of the brass. For the truth of the matter is that on changed orders from the President, the United States and its forces in Vietnam have clearly adopted the Communist policy of "fighting while negotiating," which is so endlessly stressed in every captured enemy document of any consequence.

Reversal of this policy by the President seems hardly conceivable, moreover. After all, Lyndon B. Johnson and his civilian advisers are just as glumly aware of the unhappy example of Korea as are all American officers here in Vietnam, from the lowliest company commanders to the men with three and four stars on their shoulders. It is an example worth recalling again at this juncture.

In Korea, in brief, both Chinese and North Koreans endlessly declared that they would never, never negotiate as long as a single U.S. soldier remained on the peninsula—until the United States and its allies were on the very verge of final break-through in the early summer of 1951. Whereupon all the declarations were abruptly forgotten, and negotiations were invited.

What followed is obscure. This reporter owes President Harry Truman an apology for having written in the past that the White House issued a military standstill order when the Korean talks began. It would appear, rather, that severe restrictions were imposed by the military high command on the troop commanders in the line, for fear of the accusation of "spending American lives" on offensive action while talks were in progress. At any rate, there were such restrictions.

As a result, the enemy regrouped and reinforced in near impunity. The fighting then continued for two more years, with the United States suffering nearly twice as many casualties in this period as in the pre-talks period. That is the kind of thing the U.S. commanders in Vietnam are unanimously determined to avoid. One of the wisest and most highly placed among those who have streamed through Dong Ha is known to have remarked that "the best contribution we can make to the progress of negotiations is to go on winning the war."

Thus, the sloop of the Air Cavalry, under Maj. John Tolson, to break the siege of Khe Sanh, must in reality be seen as no more than the first scene, almost the curtain-raiser, of a far larger drama. On the enemy side, meanwhile, the Hanoi propaganda about making only light resistance at Khe Sanh as a gesture of "de-escalation" is as much unadmitted hogwash as the strange near-gloating of some people at home over the U.S.-South Vietnamese "defeat" at Tet—which was in reality a major military disaster for the enemy.

The fact of the matter is that as early as late January, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap had to borrow a regimental minus from each of the two divisions besieging Khe Sanh in order to reinforce the Tet-attack on Hue.

By mid-March, almost certainly because Khe Sanh was now recognized as an immensely costly failure, the enemy stealthily withdrew into Laos most of the rest of one of these two divisions, the 325C. Little was left except the remains of the 304th Division.

The claimed "de-escalation" was in fact another symptom of the stern shortage of resources that afflicts the North Vietnamese high command. It in fact occurred long before the President's remarkable speech.

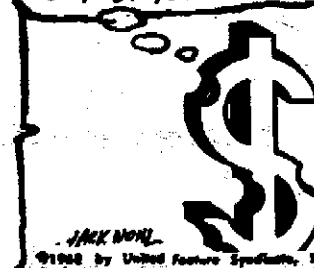

Furthermore, unless Gen. Giap is ripe for the madhouse, the Khe Sanh siege and the Tet offensive were complementary parts of a single, intimately meshed military plan.

Hence, the foregoing facts again help to show how very badly the plan miscarried. It is an excellent guess, in turn, that this grave miscarriage of a vast and overambitious plan to go for broke is the real explanation of Hanoi's agreement to talk about talking. The Hanoi leaders had strong advice from Moscow, no doubt, as they had contrary advice from Peking.

Yet the smell of what the Chinese and North Koreans did in 1951 very powerfully exudes from the decision the people in Hanoi have apparently made. The question remains, meanwhile, what the Hanoi leaders are also prepared to do in the way of "fighting while negotiating."

NOT THAT I'M COMPLAINING, BUT ALL THESE TAXES REALLY TAKE A LOT OUT OF YOU.

SYLVIA PORTER

Portrait Of an Investor

Are you one of America's "active" investors, a person who makes 25 or more stock trades a year and accounts for 75-85 per cent of all transactions by individuals in stock? If so, what sort of person are you?

We've never had a breakdown to give us specific answers to this question but perhaps the clues are in the findings of a survey just made by the stock firm of Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis of active traders at its 60 branch offices across the country. When scientifically weighted to apply to the share-owning population as a whole, the findings show that as an active investor, you:

+ Are 48 years old and a man. This is about the average age of all shareholders reported in the New York Stock Exchange census. It rings true for you are old enough to have money to invest but still young enough to want to take risks.

+ Are a college graduate. A majority of active stock traders have college degrees against only one out of three in the total shareowning population.

+ Earn on average around $22,000 a year. This is considerably above the $9,500 average income reported in the New York Stock Exchange's 1965 census of shareholders.

+ Have a stock portfolio valued at around $72,000—about five times the amount of stock owned by the average investor. This figure sticks out, for it suggests that the big-time trading is still being done with big-time money. The implication is that the little fellow is either hidden as a long-term investor in mutual funds or is among the inactive group (six or fewer trades a year.)

+ Have a full 61 per cent of your assets in the stock market, another 14 per cent in other marketable securities and only 16 per cent in such liquid savings as cash, checking accounts, U.S. Savings Bonds.

+ Have capital gains as your key investing goal—preferably long-term because of the more favorable tax treatment but you'll strive for short-term gains too.

+ Have not changed your objective of capital gains since you started investing 10 years ago. But if you have changed in any way, you have become more interested in speculation, and you have shifted to more speculative issues listed on the American Stock Exchange or trades over-the-counter.

+ Put virtually no emphasis on dividends. In fact, less than 1/2 of 1 per cent give "mainly dividends" as a financial objective.

+ Place a "comfortable retirement" first on your list of reasons for trading in stocks. You also seek to build an estate, to finance a college education for your children. You would spend some of your gains to buy goods and services you want now.

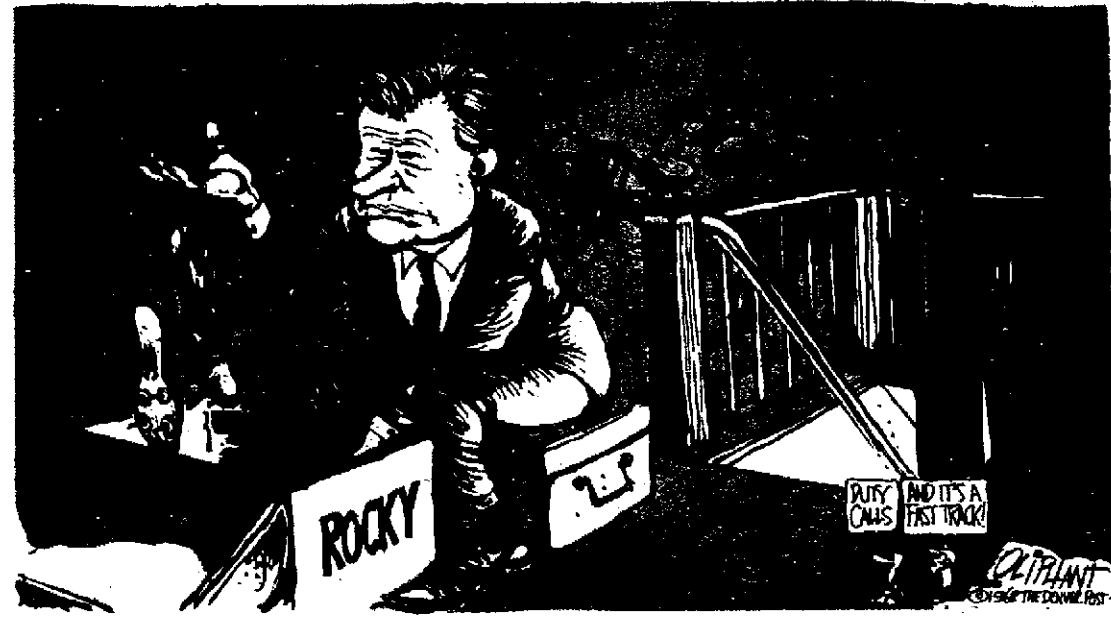

+ Rely heavily on your broker's guidance. Only three out of 10 of you shrug off your broker's advice.

+ Expect to be as active in stocks in 1968 as in 1967 and expect the stock market to be higher at the end of 1968 than at the end of 1967. You hold these views despite the fact that you believe your country is facing major economic problems.

Even if all of these findings aren't valid, enough are to underline that you are a special breed, peculiar to America. Alien to you is the hoarder, such as the Frenchman, who buries his assets in sterile gold. Equally alien to you is the Puritan conservative who protects his money in riskless forms in a financial institution. You're a speculator, betting on the long-term prosperity of this country. To date, you've won.

PEARSON & ANDERSON

Suffered Agony of Decision

WASHINGTON—Larry O'Brien was so distraught over the pressure brought on him to resign as Postmaster General and campaign for Bobby Kennedy that at one time he was close to tears. He told friends he would never have made this vital decision had not President Johnson decided to retire at the end of this term. He felt great loyalty to Johnson, who had promoted him from a White House assistant to the exalted position of Cabinet member. This was an honor he had never expected to achieve, and he was both grateful and loyal.

However, O'Brien's roots are in Massachusetts, and he first came to Washington with John F. Kennedy; so when Bobby Kennedy applied the pressure, he finally yielded.

The pressure was intense, however, and at one point O'Brien confided to friends that he considered Vice President Hubert better qualified for the White House than the man he was about to campaign for.

Labor leaders with whom O'Brien has had close contacts urged him to support Humphrey. Humphrey telephoned O'Brien twice, and was closeted with him for an hour in the Vice Presidential office. Lining up on the side of Humphrey was Mrs. O'Brien, who urged her husband to join the Humphrey forces.

What the clincher was that Bobby Kennedy exercised over O'Brien is not known, but in the end the harassed Postmaster General decided to leave the Cabinet and work for Bobby.

Pressure tactics are also being applied to Congressmen.

Rep. Richard McCarthy, D-N.Y., an all-out supporter of President Johnson, recently got a phone call from Dr. Fred M. Small, dean of the graduate school of the State University of New York at Buffalo, who is chairman of the Niagara Coalition for a Democratic Alternative, a dump-Johnson group formed before LBJ withdrew. Small informed Rep. McCarthy: "We're interested in knowing where you stand on a Democratic choice for President."

"I'm uncommitted," replied McCarthy. "Well," said Small, bluntly, "unless you publicly support either Senator McCarthy, our first choice, or Senator Kennedy, we will run a candidate against you in the primary or in the general election in November, or both."

Rep. McCarthy is a leading crusader in Congress against water pollution and is not being bulldozed. He leans toward Vice President Humphrey.

MUST READING—Look magazine's interview with Vice President Ky of South Vietnam in which he states: "Americans are here because they want to stay in Asia, not because they care for us. . . Look at that Robert Kennedy who says: 'Democracy, freedom'—words. His concept of democracy and freedom is simply ridiculous to me, because it is always these big powerful countries talking about democracy

MASON DENISON

Seats Close-to-Home

HARRISBURG—Generally lost in the shuffle of the election scramble in Pennsylvania this year is the fact that its 27 congressional seats will be up for filling once again — seats offshoots of the more close-to-home critical nature than most people realize.

Because of the fact that congressmen for the most part spend much of their time mulling among congressional corridors in Washington, the average back home voter, perhaps naturally, has a tendency to stuff off the importance (to him) of his congressman.

Similarly, a congressman who usually finds himself back in the home hustings only on week ends invariably finds it pretty tough to maintain the happy degree of liaison with his constituents he would prefer. All in all the congressional races—which are decided on the local level, not the statewide or national level—usually become something more than frustrating for the candidate seeking the voter's attention, confidence, and of course, his vote.

They are the ones who, in effect, became lost in the shuffle between strictly local candidates such as this year on the state legislative front (where State Senators and Assemblymen are much better known) and the national presidential contest level, where the dramatics of the contest compensate for lack of local familiarity.

This is unfortunate for there are a host of issues that constantly pop up on the congressional level that are of considerable concern, or at least they should be, to the folks on the home front.

Such subjects range from a local flood control project being considered on the federal level, to a national issue but still of local impact—as for example last week's congressional action in approving and sending to the President the civil rights and open housing bill.

There are those who feel that ultimately this may have more of an impact on the folks at home than most realize at the moment—which could very well be reflected in reaction to how Pennsylvania's congressional delegation voted on the off-lay, controversial legislation. Pennsylvania's 13-member Republican bloc split down the middle in voting on the measure while the 14-member Democratic bloc held fairly firm in voting for the measure.

At the moment, the anti-discrimination housing measure applies only to federally-owned housing and federally-aided apartment buildings but by January 1, 1969, the coverage is extended to outlaw discrimination in the sale or rental of other multi-unit housing and real estate developments—and a year later single-family dwellings sold through brokers will be covered.

(While Pennsylvania has its own housing anti-discrimination law, it varies in a number of respects from the just-passed federal law.)

The point is though, insofar as the new federal law is concerned, a goodly portion of Pennsylvania's electorate seems to have a fairly firm running pro or con feeling on the issue—a fact that could well become a factor in deciding the outcome of some of Pennsylvania's congressional contests this year.

Feelings have been running high in many sections of the state—both pro and con—over the so-called open housing law enacted by Pennsylvania's Legislature, a feeling expected to carry over into the congressional action just completed.

Twenty-four of Pennsylvania's 27 congressmen are seeking re-election this year. Three have converted to congressional drop-outs. Of these 24 up for another go at their congressional chairs in the April 23 primary, seven have primary opposition in which the issue of how they voted last week is expected to crop up. More emphasis however is expected during the coming two-to-four day campaign.

It is true Pennsylvania's congressmen usually are in residence in Washington—but it does not mean their activity is not of considerable concern to their folks back home. As evidenced by their action last week, quite the contrary is the case.

Winding The Clock

WASHINGTON—Instructions for winding the clock as they would be written by the United States Government if punctuality, like taxpaying, were a public obligation:

1. Who must wind?—If you are over the age of five and are not exempted under the provisions of the 1921, 1934, 1937, 1946, 1953, 1958 and 1962 amendments to the Internal Clock Code (see Vols. IV, XXI, XXVII, XXXIV, XL, LVIII and CXL of the (Annotated) Opinions of the U.S. Hordological Court of Appeals), you must wind your clock.

2. Form 2030 B (2) (212)—among the many baffling forms which you are required under penalty of law to complete and file with the Bureau of Internal Punctuality by midnight each day, the most popular is Form 2030B (2) (212). Its use is restricted to those persons who elect to wind jointly with their spouses and possess no more than three timepieces, including wrist watches, among them.

Form 2030 B (2) (212), or "the short form," requires the winder to enter on lines A, B, and C the precise times showing on each of his no more than three timepieces at the time of reporting. On Line D, these times are totaled to give Gross Total Clocktime. Dividing by three, the winder obtains Average Gross Total Clocktime, which is entered on Line E.

Then, obtaining Actual Greenwich Mean Time (by telephoning Greenwich) he enters this figure on Line F. If this figure differs from Average Gross Total Clocktime (Line E), the difference must be entered on line G (Net Error in Average Gross Total Clocktime).

Now, on Line H add Net Error in Average Gross Total Clocktime for each of the past 364 days. (Some record keeping is essential here). Then, add Line G and Line H, and divide the total by 365, obtaining your Annual Daily Net Error in Average Gross Total Clocktime (Line I).

From here it is child's play to deduct the Average Net Gross from the Gross Net Average, and by averaging the difference between the time you began to fill out the form and the time you completed Line I, to estimate the hour at which you will complete the form if you do not stop for a drink.

3. Table A—For this purpose, see Table A (Estimated Time to Complete Form 2030 B (2) (212) Without a Drink). Upon seeing Table A, you will undoubtedly want to have a drink anyhow. Therefore, see Table B (Estimated Time to Complete Form 2030 B (2) (212) With One, Two, Three, or Four Drinks).

Upon completing the form, remember to sign your name to the oath at the bottom. (This facilitates prosecuting you for perjury.) Then estimate the time set all clocks accordingly, and wind.

4. How to Wind—During winding, the clock must be held in the left hand, and the key turned with the right. (Left-handed persons may reverse the procedure, under the 1965 ruling in Koutfax v. U.S., but they must complete and file Form 1984 (Q) and attach a physician's affidavit that they are, in fact, left-handed.)

5. Form 2040—Persons with more than three clocks must file Form 2040, accompanied by sworn statements from qualified time lawyers, psychiatrists and mathematicians that they are competent to do so. They must also fill out Table 707 (Estimated Adjusted Net Gross Average Annual Daily Total Clocktime Error for the Next 24 Hours) and, with it, Form 22 (Amended Estimated Adjusted Net Gross Average Annual Total Clocktime Error for the next Hours After Resetting Gross Household Clocks) in duplicate.

In case of an error of more than 3 per cent in the previous day's Form 22 (when matched against the completed Form 2040), the winder must stop all his clocks and go immediately to jail without passing Go and without collecting $200.

6. Suppose I have an electric clock and the power goes off?—In this case, you are entitled to deduct 3 1/2 per cent of the difference between the time showing on your stopped clock and the Average Gross Clocktime showing on your mechanical clocks, or the Average Time showing on all wrist-watches plus your car clocks, whichever is the greater figure, from the mileage on your automobile odometer, provided the car is no less than 2 and no more than 5 years old, and is not used more than 22 1/2 per cent of the time for business purposes, or less than 58 per cent of the time by your children, whichever is the lesser. Enter the resulting computation on Form 17656, and append it with affidavit from your power company as to the exact period of power failure, to Table F on Form 1606. Mail it immediately to Internal Punctuality's computers at Cacapon, West Virginia. If your arithmetic is correct, you will be eligible for employment as a computer for I.P.S.

Conversational Counselling And Compost

By Bernie Wingert, County Agent

(County Agent)
APRIL 12—It's blissfully quiet in my office this Good Friday morning. The courthouse is closed today and the hallway outside my door is dark. The phones are silent, and the chairs are empty.

It's good to have a few minutes to myself to just throw papers off my desk top and to write a column. Before I leave I'll run the few soil samples that are piled in the soil testing laboratory. This time of year everyone would like to have the soil sample he brought in today tested "yesterday" so he can get the lime on and get started. Spring has a way of making dormant people burst out in a great display of energy somewhat like a forsythia bush.

Last December I had so many comments concerning a talk I had with you about my Grandpa that I'd like to refer once again to him. You remember he was 99 years old then, and I discussed with you about celebrating his birthday. Grandpa died last week, and we buried him in the little country church yard at Luthersburg where he spent nearly a century.

What a long life he had—healthy and strong. He attacked each day with vigor and purpose until the very last few years. I'm neither a philosopher, nor a theologian, but I wish that we younger people could somehow relearn the things that these older people knew so well. The long haired, smart, young, sophisticated set pretends to have all the answers for a troubled world, but I myself am not so sure.

Last evening I read Time magazine and this morning I glanced through several newspapers and decided that with today's troubles maybe it would be reasonable to try some old fashioned ideas. Little things like setting a decent example in the world by the way we lead our own lives — "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works."

Now this made good sense to my Grandpa, and he understood it. Today we sit around and say to each other, "I wonder what (Let your light so shine) really means in modern day context?"

What's happened to common sense? People talk about how insecure, or ill-adjusted, or frustrated we are, or that perhaps we're made ineffective by a sense of inferiority. Talk like that to my Grandpa would bring a snort of dismay. He had tough moral fiber tempered by hardwork—full of grit and gumption and plain common sense—he knew what was right and what was wrong.

Kinda seems to me as though many of the people of his day had the same wonderful ability. Maybe the reason that they were able to do this was because they didn't think they had to solve the world's problems. An awful lot they didn't know about because there weren't any TV's or radios. But this isn't the whole answer. I believe that my grandparents' generation used to spend their time worrying about important things. Things like their home and farm, their family, their church, and their neighbor!

Life for this man wasn't any bed of roses I'm sure, but he worked hard and taught those who cared to listen to stand on their own feet. Perhaps now he's looking back over a pleasant landscape—green valleys, wooded hillsides, and the brown freshly plowed fields.

For everything there is a season—a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant...

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

Enter Rockefeller

The question conservatives have been asking themselves during the past year or so is: What can we expect from Nelson Rockefeller by way of a foreign policy? Traditionally, Mr. Rockefeller has lined up with the anti-Communist community. I remember a few years ago, when the governor was alternating between militarism in our foreign policy and Barnum and Bailey welfarism at home, a history-minded observer remarking that he was in the tradition of the old Roman emperors who, in order to keep his legions full and happy, needed a lot of bread and a lot of circuses.

Then, suddenly, silence. The assumption was that the governor was preparing for the crucial battle of 1966 and did not want to distract attention from the problems of his unruly state. Every now and then he would say a word or two in support of the Vietnam effort, but nothing like the cataclysm of pronouncements to which he had been given over the years.

Came then the election, which he won, and the period immediately after it during which the governor remained more or less silent. The excuse then was that inasmuch as Governor

ANY PORT IN A STORM

nor Romney was the anointed instrument of Republican moderation, Rockefeller should stay out of the way, lest he utter thoughts on foreign policy that would compete with Romney's, as indeed any thoughts would have. But then Romney quit, and still there was silence, although a front-page story in The New York Times reported that Governor Rockefeller had been "re-thinking" his foreign policy; and so the anti-Communist community went on biting its fingernails.

Now it has happened. Mr. Rockefeller in a most conspicuous gesture has named Emmet John Hughes as his principal campaign adviser. Now Mr. Hughes is not the kind of man who knows whom to call in order to deliver the 10th Ward in Chicago, or the New Mexican delegation. Thus, although he is listed in the news as the campaign director of Mr. Rockefeller, he is really Mr. Rockefeller's speechwriter, and policy adviser; and a knowledge of his work is central to understanding the thought of the new Rockefeller.

calls Franklin Roosevelt's dealings with his subordinates. Mr. Rockefeller also appointed Professor Henry Kissinger, who is the anti-Communist at Harvard, as a member of his staff. That will be a happy office.

Obviously Mr. Rockefeller is, as they say, strung out on Mr. Hughes, because not only do the bulk of the Republicans object to his analysis of our foreign policy, one particular Republican does not permit the mention of Mr. Hughes' name in his presence. "Hi ya fella," I can hear Mr. Rockefeller saying to General Eisenhower at Miami—"you remember Emmett Hughes?" There goes Mr. Eisenhower's vote, which is not available to anyone who makes an association with the former aide who violated all those confidences in his book on the Eisenhower Administration.

Mr. Hughes' appointment at a considerable personal sacrifice (he had to resign a job with Newsweek which was wonderfully lucrative, and gloriously unexciting,) can only mean that Mr. Rockefeller is in this business for the long haul. If he contrives to win the nomination and then the Presidency, that will certainly keep Mr. Hughes occupied on into the future. If he loses the nomination, then Mr. Hughes will have to—well, write another book, which is what we people do when life peters out for us. But meanwhile, we must brace ourselves for the extension of Mr. Hughes' voice in the Rockefeller edition of Newsweek.

LARRY STOTZ

The King's Broad Arrow

When I worked in the Maine woods, I had always hoped that I might find a standing white pine that bore the mark of the King's Broad Arrow — proof that it had once been reserved for the Royal Navy.

The chances that such a fine specimen would have survived old age, lightning, hurricane, insects and disease, or the early woodsman's axe were very slim indeed.

Stotz

The first of the Broad Arrow trees was supposed to have been marked for mast timber in 1691, and the practice was said to have been continued almost up to the time of the American Revolution. I knew that a Broad Arrow pine would have to be the Methuselah of eastern white pines to have still been alive in 1939 — the year I was in the Maine woods. Had the mark of the Broad Arrow been cut into the tree even as late as 1770 it would have been covered over with 169 annual rings of wood. This would have effectively sealed it from prying eyes, but there would still have been indications on the bark that an axe had once been used on the tree at this precise spot.

I once re-ran a 150-year-old survey line in the Adirondacks, and found some of the original blazes on "line trees". The blazes had been grown over completely, but had left tell-tale signs on the outer bark that an axe had been used long, long ago. We had to carefully chop away the new growth before we brought to light the original blazes. By counting the annual rings of new wood exposed between the bark and the old blaze, we could determine the year the original line had been run.

I never found my white pine with the King's Broad Arrow blazed on it, and now I have a good alibi. I recently learned that white pine was rarely favored with the Broad Arrow blaze. It was considered too soft and splintery for mast timber for the King's warships.

The English, like so many people I know today, were weak in their dendrology. They lumped all evergreen trees together and referred to them all as "pines." It was the spruce and not the white pine that was the favored tree when it came to handing out the famous Broad Arrow brand. Tall, straight oaks were also marked with the Broad Arrow. Some say that single tree lengths were never used for masts for the old wooden battle-wagons. Instead, the English chose the heartwood of several select trees and laminated them into a stout mast which was bound with iron hoops to further strengthen it.

Perhaps the only way that the mystery of the King's Broad Arrow can be resolved is to find enough of the old sunken warships in Davey Jones' locker and send divers down to bring up sections of the masts for analysis.

Eastern white pine has always been my favorite tree. I still want to believe that the King of England favored this species for the Royal Navy. I have no quarrel with the native spruces of the New England states. They rate high in my affection. I just never saw many of them that would have been big enough for ship mast timber. But then I was born 135 years too late to have seen the forests of New England when the last of the Broad Arrow trees were marked. Undoubtedly there were giants in those days.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband died five years ago and left me with two fine sons, ages six and eight. Seven months ago I married a bachelor. He liked my boys and they liked him. On occasion he would complain about their behavior and say, half-joking, "When I am their father I'll see that they get some discipline."

I am afraid our marriage is in danger and I need your help. My husband has turned from an even-tempered man into a tyrant. He and I have no problem, but his attitude toward the boys is horrible. He says they are ill-mannered, irresponsible, spoiled rotten. I say they are high-spirited, energetic, normal kids. True, they punch each other sometimes in the back seat of the car, but then all brothers do. When we go out for dinner they don't always behave perfectly; they spill things and make a little too much noise. So what?

I've always taken the boys with me in the evening, to dinner and the theater and visiting friends. (I felt this was compensation for being fatherless.) Now they expect to go and I see nothing wrong with taking them.

I told my husband I was writing to you and he said he was going to write to you also. Of course he never will. Can you give me some help please?—PHOENIX

DEAR PHOENIX: The letter you were sure your husband wouldn't write arrived the same day as yours. Here it is—at his request:

Dear Ann Landers: My wife informed me she was writing to you about my abusive treatment of her two sons. I told her I was going to write and give you the other side of the story. Please publish my letter if you decide to publish hers.

My wife considers the boys "normal." I say they have been pampered, catered to and are totally undisciplined. They have no regard for their mother whatever. When she asks them to do something they ignore her. The teachers complain because they are irresponsible and mouthy. Recently we took the boys on a 200-mile motor trip and they fought in the back seat until I became so annoyed I stopped the car and gave them both a whack. A few minutes later, when we were going about 60 miles an hour, one of the boys hit me on the head from behind and we very nearly went into a ditch.

My wife insists on taking these kids to dinner and movies on school nights which I feel is outrageous. If they are too tired to get up the next day she lets them sleep. She says they need the feeling of security more than they need to go to school.

I love my wife and I want this marriage to work. I told her before we married that I would help her raise the boys and she seemed agreeable. Now she says, "They are MY sons. Leave them alone."

I hope you will counsel us in print. —H.G.W.

Ardell Ekstrom, Neil North Exchange Vows In Frewsburg

Ardell Ekstrom and Neil North exchanged wedding vows on Saturday, April 13, in a 2:30 afternoon double ring ceremony in the Zion Lutheran Church, Frewsburg, N.Y. Officiating at the candlelight service in the presence of one hundred and fifty guests was the Rev. Erling, pastor of the church.

Wedding music was provided at the organ by Mrs. Larry Sandberg, and Mrs. Lewis Yuchy was the vocal soloist.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ekstrom of Frewsburg, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Roy Christy of Russell, and the late Mr. Paul North.

Escorted on the arm of her brother, Arthur Ekstrom, the bride approached the altar in an A-line silhouette gown of silk organza over bridal tulle. A chapel train swept gracefully away from the long skirt of the gown. Touches of Venetian lace offered contrasts and the empire bodice of the dress was entirely of the lace. Her tiered bouffant veil of silk illusion depended from a crown of pearls and crystal net. She carried a bouquet of daisies. The matron of honor for her sister was Mrs. Harold Classon of Greensburg, who was gowned in lime green crepe with matching headpiece. She carried a single rose. The junior bridesmaid was the niece of the bride, Miss Vickie Classon of Greensburg, in yellow crepe, matching headpiece and also carrying a single rose. James Babyak was the best man, and ushers were Edward Hale and Gary Gordon.

Mrs. Perry Swanson, grandmother of the groom was remembered with a pink rosebud corsage.

A reception followed the wedding immediately in the parlors of the Zion Lutheran Church. Master and mistress of ceremonies were Mr. and Mrs. James Babyak; aides were Miss Rose Mary Ekstrom, Mrs. John Ekstrom, Mrs. Myron Ekstrom, Mrs. Kermit Ekstrom, Miss Kathy Hale and Miss Johanna Ellison.

For traveling to Florida, the new Mrs. North wore a brown linen dress with brown and white jacket. Mr. and Mrs. North will be at their home in Russell after April 27.

The bride is a graduate of Frewsburg High School and is employed by L. Hopes Windows. The groom, a Warren Area High School graduate, is employed with the 7-Up Company.

The rehearsal dinner was held at the Town Club, 210 Pine st., Jamestown, N.Y.

Fine Play, Fine Music Is Coming

On April 25, 26, 27, when playgoers attend The Sound of Music at Warren Area High School, they will be fortunate not only in that they will be viewing a fine play, but also that they will be hearing wonderful music.

Richard Rodgers' and Oscar Hammerstein II's score follows the plot closely and accentuates the high points of the story, deftly defining characters and relationships. A good example of this is the relationship between Maria and the Nuns, the story of which could almost be told by their songs.

The story opens with Janna Roop, as Maria, singing of her love of life and nature in "The Sound of Music." At Nonnberg Abbey the nuns are singing a beautiful Latin prayer, "Dixit Dominus."

Later, the nuns, played by Barbara Larson, Patty Simmons, and Peggy Kates, express their disapproval of Maria's lateness and disobedience as they sing "How Do You Solve a Problem Like Maria?" commenting on the fact that "...she's always late for everything except for every meal." The only one who takes Maria's side is Sister Margaretta, who claims that Maria makes her laugh. However, the nuns cannot hide their affection for Maria, and they agree that the problem is that she is a girl.

The Mother Abbess, played by Nancy Niedzialak, scolds Maria for being late, but the young postulant and the Mother Abbess find they have much in common as they sing "My Favorite Things." Finally, however, even the Mother Abbess comes to doubt Maria's vocation as a nun. The Mother Abbess sends the young girl to the villa of the Von Trapps for a trial period, where she will care for Captain Von Trapp's seven children.

Tickets For Charity Ball Go On Sale Today

Mrs. Harold A. Johnson, chairman of general admission tickets for the annual Warren General Hospital Auxiliary's Charity Ball, has announced that tickets go on sale today. They may be obtained by phoning the following committee members: Mrs. Winston Teague, 723-1319; Mrs. Roy Boettcher, 723-5857; Mrs. Thomas Marsh 723-8171. They are priced at $8 per couple; the sum includes refreshments. For the Royal Ball, which is the name chosen for this year's event, Mrs. Richard McClain and Mrs. Richard Betts will issue proclamations. They will be on display at strategic points around town this week. All loyal Warren subjects will be invited to attend and cut a Royal Frug and while thoroughly enjoying themselves, to keep in mind that they are "filling the coffers" of the Warren General Hospital Auxiliary, enabling it to continue its many good works for the hospital.

To make this the royalest charity ball yet, the cooperation of everyone is needed, and all are asked to set aside the date of Saturday, May 6, for the dance which takes place at the Woman's Club from 9 that evening until 1 a.m.

CARDIAC ASTHMA

Q. What is cardiac asthma? What causes this condition?

A. Cardiac asthma is a condition characterized by labored or difficult breathing associated with certain types of heart disease. Attacks are brought on by weakness or failure of the portion of the heart (left ventricle) that pumps blood to body vessels. Attacks usually occur at night. The victim has difficulty in breathing and very often experiences a terrifying sense of suffocation. Attacks last for a few minutes to a few hours and leave the patient in an exhausted condition for hours or days.

UREMIA

Q. Is uremia the same as uremic poisoning?

A. The word uremia literally means urine in the blood and was first used more than a hundred years ago to indicate the intoxication or poisoning (uremic poisoning) resulting from insufficient purification of the blood by the kidneys. Doctors now identify different types of uremia and employ appropriate treatment for the various types.

Pitt Police Seek Dismissal Of Safety Director Craig

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Safety Director David Craig challenged a police faction Sunday to come forward with proof that he mis-handled the recent racial disorder.

A petition is being circulated among police asking for the resignation of Craig. Craig made this statement: "I issue a challenge to that little group of unrevealed writers of the petition against me—to present themselves at the regular meeting of city council at 2 p.m. Monday, April 15, to give any proof or specification they have to council and news media concerning their terrible charges: (1) That I issued to police a 'directive impairing the safety' of anyone; (2) that I have ever 'surrendered the community to criminal elements.'"

Craig said council has the power and duty to investigate any director, and added:

"If there was any basis to the terrible charges such as these, not one day should pass without official action."

Mayor Joseph Barr says he's backing Craig all the way.

Sgt. William Cavanaugh, president of the Fraternal Order of Police, confirmed Saturday that the petition accuses Craig of "the surrendering of this city to the criminal element."

The petition accused Craig of not letting police use sufficient force to put down the five days of arson and looting.

Cavanaugh said the petition will be discussed at his organization's meeting Thursday. Reports say the petition has been signed by from as few as 650 to as many as 1,200 of the city's 1,600 policemen.

Barr released a statement Saturday saying, "In view of these reports, I want it clearly understood that I am in wholehearted support of Director David W. Craig."

Barr said Craig "enabled this city to avoid the bloodshed which other cities unfortunately have experienced during recent disorders."

Pennsylvania Makes Hit At Tokyo Trade Fair

BOOSTING PENNSYLVANIA

view lines of Japanese people anxious for samples. The event is the export building U.S. trade show in Tokyo, Japan through April 21.

TOKYO — Japanese families by the thousands are crunching Pennsylvania pretzels as they visit the states' sales promotion booth in Tokyo.

"They come back for more," says Dr. Leland H. Bull, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture.

"The next step is to build new trade relations so more Pennsylvania products will be on Japanese store shelves."

The Pennsylvania booth is manned by pretty Japanese demonstrators and a group of state officials and businessmen. It will be open throughout the American Festival at Harumi Wharf which closes April 21.

The trade group says that creating international sales raises many hurdles including import restrictions, competition from other exporters and the complexity of building product acceptance.

"By closing time we hope to have orders on the books to boost Pennsylvania's 9 million dollars a year farm export business to a new high," Bull added.

"We are working for further growth each year thereafter as the Japanese population expands."

Pretzels are the crowd stopper that attracts attention to the many other state products on display including processed fruits, mushrooms, turkey, chicken, forest products and maple syrup.

Pennsylvania officials here say that they are fully aware that Japan must have access to U.S. markets to earn the dollars to pay for Pennsylvania exports.

Japanese officials are concerned over their future markets in the United States for steel, textiles and chemicals, particularly in view of the current debate over trade restrictions in Congress.

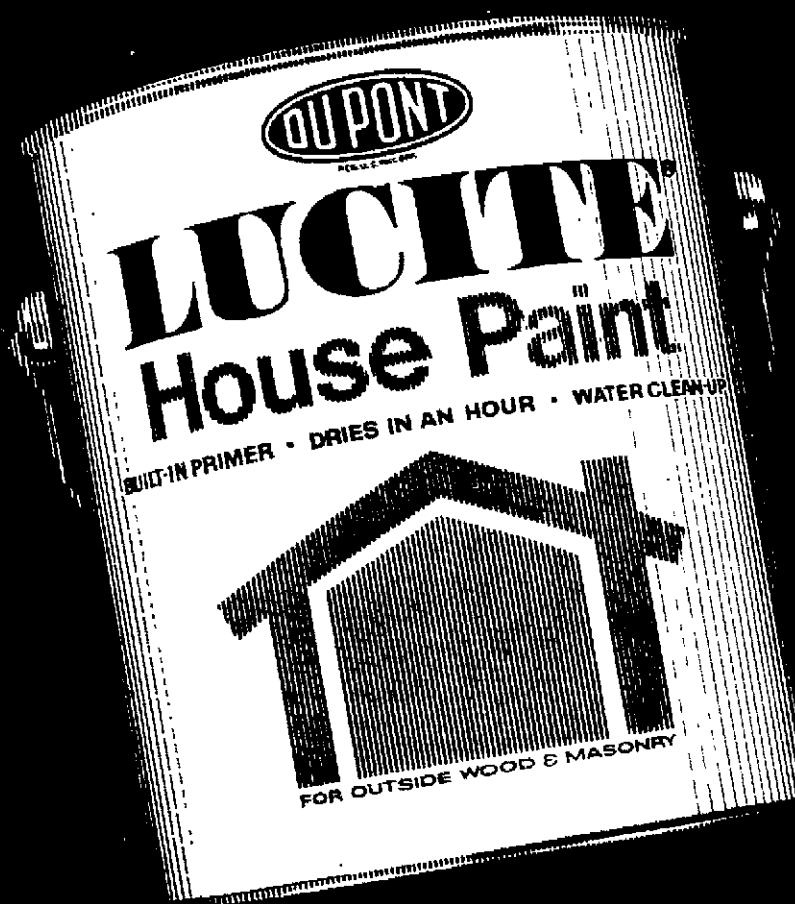

Japanese dairy leaders have asked Dr. Bull to discuss the latest advances in artificial breeding and feeding. He will be meeting with farmers at the Hokkaido Federation of Agricultural cooperatives and scientists at the Hokkaido Agricultural Experiment Station.

Maritza Morgan, Formerly of Warren, Has One-Man Art Show in Tulsa

NEW MURALS FOR LIBRARY

Current project of a Chautauqua artist, Mrs. Norman Morgan, formerly of Warren, is a series of mural paintings for the new children's room at Chautauqua's Smith-Wilkes Library. She

Mrs. Norman Morgan of Chautauqua, N.Y., formerly of Warren, is presently in Tulsa, Okla., where a one-man show of her primitive religious paintings are being presented.

The catalog of the exhibition lists twenty-five of her glowing paintings done in the primitive manner Maritza Morgan has restored in this day.

Another recent showing was in New York City, where her paintings attracted wide attention.

A story with photographs, in the Tulsa, Okla., Tribune shows the exhibition in the lounge of All Souls Unitarian Church in Tulsa, where the display of her contemporary primitive paintings was given a preview. The art show in Tulsa was sponsored ed by the religion and arts committee, of which Mrs. L. Murray Neumann is chairman. It is reported that on the first day of the showing, six paintings were sold.

In the show catalog it is mentioned that Maritza Morgan, Chautauqua, N. Y., was born in Czechoslovakia, and influenced by Slavic folk art, which she saw throughout Middle Europe as a young girl. "She has been painting professionally since 1940," the story continues. "She studied at Cornell University and Art Students' League in New York. Her paintings reflect the glowing color and spirit of medieval masterpieces.

In an interview in Tulsa, Mrs. Morgan is quoted as saying that "the Bible delights me—the sense of humor and the heavy-handed lecturing, somehow hoping that future generations will profit by their lives and mistakes."

"The medium I use is extremely difficult, I wish it so. I do think this helps get the Biblical mood. The paintings are contemporary primitives, as I view the Biblical writings as eternally contemporary primitives."

Maritza Morgan's current project is a series of murals in the new children's room of Smith-Wilkes Library at Chautauqua, N.Y., a labor of love.

No Egg for LBJ From Louis Jay

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—President Johnson did not receive an Easter egg from Louis J. Jay this year.

Jay is mad at the President. "I sent one to Johnson his first year in office and to his daughters the second two years, but now I'm mad at him because of the (Vietnam) war," Jay said.

The freehand artist has been painting Easter eggs and sending them to presidents since Franklin D. Roosevelt's first term.

Madame Chiang Kai-shek requested and received one of the brilliantly colored eggs. Winston Churchill got one as did Indira Gandhi.

Jay said he hopes to paint another egg with the presidential seal next year. "I hope for McCarthy or Rockefeller," he said.

1 Killed, 1 Hurt In Rt. 15 Crash

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP)—A car went out of control on U.S. 15 last weekend, slammed into a parked car and hit four gasoline pumps before bursting into flames. Police said the driver was killed and a passenger critically injured.

Officers identified the victim of the accident Saturday as Robert L. Baker, 24. His driver's license listed his address as Olean, N.Y., but he was believed to be working in Williamsport. The accident occurred 10 miles north of here.

Two Marines were asleep in the car parked in a restaurant lot, but police said they escaped without injury.

Baker's passenger was identified as Ronald W. McGeary, 22, of Rochester, N.Y. He was in critical condition at Williamsport Hospital.

Baker's parents and wife live in Williamsport, police said.

Social Security Benefits Available to Widows at 50

A number of widows in this area may still not have heard of the recent change in social security which enables them to get social security benefits at age fifty, Lewis Epstein, social security district manager in Jamestown, said today.

Under the new law a widow who is unable to work because of severe disability, and whose husband worked long enough under social security, may be able to get monthly benefits as early as age fifty. She is considered disabled if she has a physical or mental impairment which is severe enough to prevent her from performing any gainful work, and if the impairment has lasted or is expected to last at least twelve months. Widows are eligible for these benefits only if their disability began before their husband's death or within seven years after his death. If they had received social security benefits as a widow with children, they may also be eligible if they were disabled before the payments ended, or within seven years after they ended.

The amount of the widow's benefit depends on what the husband's retirement benefit would have been had he been 65 at the time of his death, and how old the widow is when her payments begin. For example, at age fifty she would receive 50 per cent of what her husband's retirement benefit would have been; at age 55 it would be 60% per cent. The full amount of a widow's benefit at age 62 is 82½ per cent of her deceased husband's retirement benefit; however, if she starts receiving disability benefits at an earlier age under the new law, the reduced rate will be payable after age 62 as well.

Epstein said he believes that quite a few women in this area who are fifty or over may be eligible for benefits, but to receive payment they must file an application. He urged readers to advise friends and relatives of the new provision and encourage them to get in touch with the local office. The social security office in Jamestown is located in the Federal Building and is open until 8 p.m. on Friday evenings.

Steel Negotiations Open Monday

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The steel industry opens its accelerated negotiations schedule Monday with local talks on issues ranging from incentive pay for millhands to parking space for their cars.

Local officials aren't optimistic that they'll be able to clear the mountain of tough local issues in time for the industry-wide talks set to start June 3 in

New York. The national contract expires Aug. 1.

Anthony Tomko, president of 5,000-man Local 1408 at U. S. Steel's National Tube plant, has a list of over 100 issues to throw on the bargaining table. John E. McManigal, president of the 7,300-man Local 1397 at U. S. Steel's Homestead Works, has proposals that take up over 40 typewritten pages, double-spaced.

"I doubt if we'll get much of it resolved locally," says McManigal. He has until May 15.

The industry is bound by the contract to wait until early June for nationwide talks. But top negotiators considered the prospects of White House intervention last month and decided to at least get an early start on local issues.

Local union men agree that incentive pay for all workers will be one of the toughest issues at the local level and, probably eventually, the national level, too.

"I thought that should be a basic issue," says McManigal. "But the international said to bring it up on the local level."

At McManigal's plant, all but about 10 per cent — mostly clerical workers and janitors — are already covered by incentive pay.

But at Tomko's plant, only 30 per cent are covered.

"This is definitely an important issue," says Tomko. "We've been trying for five years to get this settled on the local level, but the company just puts us off."

"It was an issue in the last contract, but they took it back to Washington, and we never got it."

Then Tomko lists some of the other local grievances: Safety practices, retirement, guaranteed job security. McManigal's union has asked him to get more parking space for workers and a fulltime doctor for the plant.

"These little things hurt a worker more than the big ones," says Tomko. "They shouldn't really be tough to settle, but the company may take the position they've economic issues and kick them up to the national level."

Tomko says he figures the national talks will have to take up — along with the traditional wage increase — earlier retirement, the incentive pay and a guaranteed that workers won't be phased out by automation.

But cold, hard cash is destined to be a big priority. The international's convention in Atlantic City said so last month.

One industry source says he expects the union to ask for a 9 per cent hike for its 450,000 men in basic steel. He doesn't expect the negotiators to settle for less than the 6.1 per cent raise the Steelworkers won from the can industry last January, six hours before a strike deadline.

The steel industry is expected to argue for a cheaper settlement by pointing to nosediving earnings reports.

Of the top ten producers, only California-based Kaiser showed an earnings increase last year.

U.S. Steel's return on its investment, according to Iron Age Magazine, dropped from 6.8 per cent in 1966 to 5.1 per cent in 1967.

$2.3 Million State Park Posts 'No Swimming' Signs

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — The new Frances Slocum State Park opens May 30, but there will be no swimming in its 165-acre lake — hub of recreational facilities — because the water already is polluted.

The $2.3 million park, which sprawls over 1,006 acres of land in Kingston Township five miles north of here, will provide recreational facilities for the half-million residents in the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton area.

A dam was built across Abrahams Creek to control flooding in the Wyoming-West Wyoming area and the resulting backup of water formed the lake, counted on for swimming.

A State Health Department spokesman said the pollution, discovered on inspection when a bathing permit was sought, stems from pasture land upstream.

The spokesman said cattle had been using Abrahams Creek for drinking water and that excretion had seeped downstream into the lake. Another factor, he said, was faulty septic tanks in upstream housing developments.

Corrective measures have been taken to clear up the septic drainage, the spokesman said, but the health department has no control over farmland. And the flow of the creek is not sufficient to dilute the pollution, he said.

Although the lake is not satisfactory for swimming, he said, it could be used for boating. If the pollution does not abate, state officials say it may be necessary to build swimming pools.

The park was named for Frances Slocum, a 5-year-old Quaker girl who was kidnapped by Indians from her Wilkes-Barre home in 1778. She was taken west where she spent the rest of her life.

Fifty years later her brothers found her living with a tribe in Indiana. She refused to return to Pennsylvania. A state park near Peru, Ind., also is named for her.

Four Seeking Delegate Seats At Convention

George Andrews, Alfred J. DiBernardo, Erna Hennessy and Gary W. Sykes, all of State College, have announced their intention to run in the Pennsylvania Presidential Primary on April 23 for the four delegate seats to the Democratic Convention in August from the 23rd Congressional District.

The four candidates are pledged to vote in the August Convention for the winner of the Pennsylvania Primary. A write-in campaign is being organized for the four.

Speaking for the group, Mr. Hennessy said that the campaign is being undertaken because the four candidates listed on the ballot are unopposed and are not pledged to vote for the winner of the primary.

"If we are selected," Mrs. Hennessy continued, "we will vote for the man chosen by the people."

Area Men in Armed Service

Archie H. Andersen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Andersen Sr., of 9 S. State st., North Warren, has completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Texas. He has been assigned to the Air Force Technical Training Center at the Defense Language Institute, Monterey Calif., for specialized schooling as a language specialist.

Airman Andersen, a 1965 graduate of Warren Area High School, attended Edinboro State College.

Wonderful World

BY DON NEAL

After a long sleep, you don't come wide awake and bounce out of bed with bubbling enthusiasm, do you? Well, neither do the trees and plants of our woodlands. Just like us, they take a little time to get the circulation moving and work up energy before showing any marked degree of liveliness. And just like us, they seem to be as reluctant after their long winter's sleep to be "wide awake and bushy-tailed" as we could ever be.

I got to thinking about this just today. With trout season just a few days off, I needed some minnows. So after gathering together my minnow traps a minnow bucket, and a boat cushion I place on top of the minnow bucket so that I will have a soft seat while I wait for the playful minnows to make the mistake of entering the trap, I tramped my way to a woodland pool I favor for the purpose.

Trapping minnows is sometimes a very slow business. It provides one with an awful lot of time to think about many things—or even about nothing at all. But today I found myself considering the leafless trees that were all about me and the lifeless brown forest duff that covered the ground wherever I looked. It would seem that this forest world I observed was as dormant now as it had been in January or February.

But I knew different. All about me there was the stirring of life—unseen, but just as vital as if the trees were already unfolding their leaves to the sun and the woodland shrubs were bursting into bloom. Nature was stirring in her bed and would soon awaken to the glorious morning of spring.

On close examination one could see that the tree buds were already swollen, fed by the sap that had been welling up from the roots deep in the ground ever since the first warm day had started the snow to melt. For moisture is the most basic need for growth. But then, too, longer days and warmer temperatures also contribute to the chemical changes necessary to bring about the miracle growth of spring.

Just as these three elements—moisture, lengthening days and warm temperatures—are necessary to bring life to the seeds lying beneath the leaf cover on the forest floor. For without the benefit of these elements of life the seeds would remain dormant and unborn. While we still don't know all of the answers to the many questions that can be asked concerning the "birth" of a seed, we do know the answers to some of the more important ones. For, in general, the process of reproduction in plants is less complicated than it is in animals. But even at that, our most informed scientists are still investigating some of the steps that occur between the time the flower is fertilized to form the seed and the plant grows to maturity.

Most of you will be informed about the bee that fertilizes the flower so that the seed can be formed and possess the ability to develop reproductive life. But how much do you know about what takes place after the seed has ripened and fallen to the ground? Not much, I bet. For once the embryo has been formed, food for spring growth has been stored, and the whole wrapped in a protective shell the romance of the seed's formation seems to fade.

But the romance of awakening life is even more exciting if we consider the physical forces and chemical factors that react to bring it about. First, it is necessary for the ripened seed to "season." Sometimes this is accomplished in a matter of hours or days, other times it requires months and the interplay of freezing and thawing weather to ready the seed for germination. And in all cases it is the interaction of freezing and thawing and attacks of micro-organisms that tenderizes the shell of the seed so that it will burst when the embryo starts swelling with growth.

The actual sprouting takes place when moisture is present and oxygen is available at the proper temperature for growth. Then a chemical process sets in that allows the seedling to digest starches to sugar, fats to soluble compounds, and proteins to amino acids. Almost the same as digestion causes the same changes to take place in the human body. These altered foods produce energy and increase respiration so that the embryo starts to grow.

Down goes the first root. The root that will anchor the plant in place and supply more moisture and food materials for further growth. More roots mean more growth, so they are grown rapidly as the plant strives to reach maturity.

And while we normally think of seedlings pushing their first shoots up through the soil, it is interesting to know that only a few species do. Most of them actually pull their first leaves up out of the ground. This is so because the stem first tries to grow towards the surface, then arches its back and, as the leaves start to form, pulls them quickly out into the spring sunshine.

Oh, that spring sunshine! It does something to me when it starts chasing the winter chill from my blood and I do some funny things. Today I had my turkey call with me to do a little spring yelping and—but I'll have to tell you about that another time.

ERROR COSTS de VICENZO TIE

Bob Goalby Awarded Masters Golf Victory in Controversial Finish

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Bob Goalby, a 30-1 dark-horse, won the 32nd Masters golf title Sunday when Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina, who apparently had tied for the lead, signed an erroneous score card.

The shock announcement came moments after both had finished in an apparent dead heat at 277.

Hord Hardin, president of the U.S. Golf Association and chairman of the Masters Rules Committee, announced that Roberto had signed for a 4 at the 17th hole where he took a 3.

Under the rules, a player is stuck with the score for which he signs if it is a higher score. If it is a lower score, he is automatically disqualified.

The incident threw a damper over one of the most thrilling and dramatic finishes in Masters history.

De Vicenzo was credited with second money at 278.

Hardin's official announcement said in part:

"Under the rules of golf, he (De Vicenzo) will be charged with a 66, which does not leave him in a tie with Bob Goalby, who is 11 under par."

On the 17th, De Vicenzo sank a four-foot putt for a birdie six, then followed with an eagle putt of about 10 feet by Goalby on the par 5 15th.

De Vicenzo, nearly in tears, said, "I made the wrong score. I feel so sorry for myself."

"But I congratulate Bob Goalby," the Argentine added. "He gave me so much pressure that I lost my brains."

Clifford Roberts, founder of the tournament, said that he will always consider De Vicenzo a champion along with Goalby for 1968.

Both players finished shakily, showing signs of surrendering to the extreme pressure.

De Vicenzo, hitting his second shot on the 18th into a crowd at the left, took a bogey 5.

Goalby bogeyed the 17th, three-putting, and then came to the 18th, where he needed a par for an apparent tie.

Tommy Aaron, playing with De Vicenzo, kept Roberto's card and was responsible for the mistake.

He said he was sitting under the umbrella at the official desk on No. 18 when he noticed that he had made an error and given De Vicenzo a 4 instead of a 3 on the 17th.

"I looked around and tried to find him, but he had gone," Aaron said.

The golfers play in twosome and keep their opponents' card as well as their own. Each player has the responsibility of checking the card kept by his opponent and making sure it is correct.

For years, golf authorities have argued that the penalty is too severe and the rules should be changed.

A similar incident happened in the U.S. Women's Open at Mamaroneck N.Y. in 1957.

Jackie Pung of Hawaii won the title but in the confusion surrounding her victory she inadvertently signed an erroneous card.

She was disqualified, and the title went to the No. 2 finisher, Betsy Rawls.

Also, two years ago at Pensacola, Fla., Doug Sanders was leading the PGA tour tournament by a substantial margin when he neglected to sign the card at all.

He said that he had been hustled to the press tent and had signed several autographs. He thought he had signed the card. But he was disqualified, creating a controversy.

TEAM LOSES 8 STARTERS

Penn State Has Big Problem Of Filling Sherman's Shoes

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Penn State's football team lost eight starters to graduation. Normally, that wouldn't be too bad—except one of them was Tom Sherman, the Nittany Lions' versatile quarterback.

And if the team is to repeat as Lambert Trophy winner — or even come close to last year's 8-2 record and Gator Bowl tie — it probably will need a field general to match Sherman's brilliance.

All coach Joe Paterno has now is a bunch of question marks, however.

"The quarterback job is wide open," says Paterno. He's not kidding.

There are seven players who will try to fill Sherman's big shoulder pads. At the start of spring training last Saturday, junior Chuck Burkhardt seemed to have the inside track—purely by attrition. He was the No. 2 quarterback behind Sherman, directing only 104 plays last season.

Paterno also feels junior tailback Bob Campbell could be converted into a fine tosser.

"I feel strongly that he can learn to throw the way a quarterback should," said Paterno. "Whether he'll be able to do the other things a quarterback has to do, we won't know until practice."

"But he worked hard down South and told me he's willing to play anywhere we need him."

Conversion seems to be the keynote for the Nittany Lions in '68. Wally Cirafo, a regular defensive back last year, and Frank Spaziani, a defensive end, also will bid for the quarterback position.

Other candidates include Terry Sealise, a junior, and three signal-callers up from the freshman team—Jim Colbert, Terry Stump and Mike Cooper.

Paterno believes that one of them will be the Tom Sherman of '68. But the new Penn State quarterback will have a tough time trying to match Sherman's credentials, which included six school records:

— Total offense for a career (2,850 yards rushing and passing);

— Total passing yardage for a career (2,588 yards);

— Touchdown passes, one season (13);

— Pass completions, one season (102);

— Yards passing, one season (1,616);

— And, total offense, one season (1,761 yards rushing and passing).

He led Penn State to one of its finest seasons in years, and directed the 17-17 tie with Florida State in the Gator Bowl.

Verbatim Tops in Mile

NEW YORK (AP) — Verbatim wouldn't rate early in the Gotham Stakes, but the Kentucky Derby eligible sure rated at the end of the mile-right on top.

"This is a quick horse, and we were trying to rate but couldn't do it," jockey John Rotz said after last Saturday's $60,000 race at Aqueduct. "I didn't want to throw him down and had to let him go."

And go, the Speak John colt did, beating Wise Exchange to the wire by 2 1/2 lengths over a fast track in 1:34. The time was three-fifths of a second faster than the old stakes record held by Debbysman and Stupendous.

What a Pleasure, one of three colts in the race not nominated for the Derby, was four lengths back of Wise Exchange and gained the show by three-quarters of a length over Conceded, another Derby eligible.

It was Verbatim's third stakes victory, all this year—the others were the Bahamas and a division of the Bay Shore—and his first at more than seven furlongs.

But the question remains as to Verbatim's ability to go a distance of ground. He was seventh, 15 lengths back in the Ev. glades and sixth, beaten by 17 lengths in the Flamingo, each at 1 1/4 miles, and finished six, 11 lengths back, in the 1 1/16 mile Governor's Gold Cup April 6.

Pittsburgh Pipers Win ABA Eastern Division

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Connie Hawkins and Chicago Vaughn led the Pittsburgh Pipers to a 114-105 victory over Minnesota Sunday night for the Eastern Division playoff championship in the American Basketball Association.

Hawkins scored 24 points and Vaughn added 22 as Pittsburgh earned the right to meet New Orleans for the league's first championship by winning the best-of-7 series 4-1.

The fast-breaking Pipers led most of the night and late in the third quarter were 17 points ahead.

Minnesota, led by strong rebound work by Sam Smith and Skip Thorer, started a spree that brought the Muskies to an 89-89 tie with seven minutes left in the fourth quarter.

But Tom Washington, filling in for Hawkins who sat out most of the second half in foul trouble, scored and Pittsburgh was never in trouble again.

Don Freeman led Minnesota with 23 points.

Mowry with a 71 Sunday and Blocker with a 69, finished the 72-hole tourney at 279, nine under par. But on the first hole of the playoff, Mowry earned a 3-foot putt for a par, while Blocker missed a 6-footer and took a bogey.

Rained Out

ATLANTA (AP) — Sunday's baseball game between the Atlanta Braves and Cincinnati Reds was postponed by rain after three innings.

The Braves were leading 1-0 when the rain came in the top of the fourth inning.

76ers Can Win Title Tonight

BOSTON (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers withstood repeated Boston challenges and foul trouble Sunday in defeating the Celtics 110-105 for a commanding 3-1 lead in the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division playoff finals.

Sharp shooting Hal Greer led the 76ers with 28 points, but he had plenty of help from Philadelphia's fearsome trio of Wilt Chamberlain, Lucius Jackson and Chet Walker, who contributed 22 apiece.

The 76ers, defeating the Celtics for the second time in Boston in the playoffs, can wrap up the Eastern Division title with a victory in Philadelphia tonight.

The 76ers blew a 15-point lead in the second period but bounced back to score eight straight points for a 68-62 halftime advantage.

TAKE A BEATING

Warren County streams took a real beating over the weekend as trout season opened for the current year. Some estimate of what the army of nimrods numbered can be had by considering that this photo, taken on Tionesta Creek, is centrally located in an area where over 400 miles of trout streams are available to the fisherman. With the large number of fishermen out, pressure on the streams were being responsible for spotty catches being general. (Photo by Neal)

Rookie Gives Black Hawks A 3-2 Edge

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Bob Schmautz scored on an 80-foot slap shot with less than 3 1/2 minutes to play Sunday night as the Chicago Black Hawks scored their third straight Stanley Cup playoff victory against the New York Rangers 2-1.

The victory sent the Black Hawks back to Chicago with a 3-2 lead in the best-of-7 series. The sixth game will be played Tuesday night.

Schmautz, who scored three goals in 13 regular-season games, unloaded from mid-ice and his rising shot beat Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin cleanly.

The teams had traded first-period goals with Donnie Marshall scoring for New York.

Bobby Hull, who drew two minors and a major penalty during the game, tied it for the Hawks on a power play with Mikita and Schmautz assisting at 16:14 of the opening period.

Trout Fishermen Find Opening Day Luck Spotty

With the trout season opening over the weekend, Warren County streams reached a high degree of attention as a small army of anglers tried their luck. Reports from various areas indicated that luck was spotty, with some fishermen getting their limits early while others put in long hours on the stream with only token catches for their trouble.

Streams that drew the heaviest concentrations of the rod-benders were the Brokenstraw, Tionesta Creek, Chapman Dam and the tailwaters off the Kinzua Dam.

Apparently it was in the tailwaters of the Kinzua Dam where some of the most satisfying fishing was to be found. Catches there ran to fair numbers, but the size of trout being netted was well above average. Minnows seemed to be the most popular bait at this hot spot, and produced several trout of over 20 inches in length. Both rainbows and browns were hitting in the tailwaters.

Other large trout were taken at Chapman Dam, but most luck on these waters ran to stocked trout of acceptable size. The fish stocked at this favorite "fishin' hole" this year were above average in length and weight. Salmon eggs, cheese, worms and artificials were giving the best results.

On the Tionesta and its tributaries, as well as on the Big Brokenstraw, all types of baits and lures were being used with mixed results. It was on the streams, however, where worms and minnows were accounting for more fish than the "off" baits such as salmon eggs and cheese. Spinners were working well on the larger waters.

Cancer Service Programs Increase

Although the Federal government is a heavy participant in various health programs of the nation (Medicare, for example), the service programs of the American Cancer Society have not been thrown off stride. Mr. Jack L. Donaldson, president of the Warren County Unit of the American Cancer Society, said today.

On the contrary, he pointed out that the Cancer Society's service programs have in many instances increased sharply in activity.

Operating as it does among the elderly, the government's Medicare Program serves the age group in which cancer is a greater menace than in younger age brackets. Yet this massive Federal program presents many problems and questions confusing to the public. This, then, becomes an area in which the local Cancer Society unit can offer welcome advice to the public.

As Medicare's provisions and rulings change or proliferate, said Mr. Donaldson, on such matters as Extended Care Benefits and Home Health Service after Hospitalization, the Cancer Society should play an increasing major role in cooperating with local area nursing associations, community health aid programs, medical social services and homemaker services.

"The demands of the situation are crystal clear," Mr. Donaldson stated. "We will continue to maintain close liaison with government and other voluntary agencies. At the same time we will continue to be alert to the cancer patients in our community who don't come under the umbrella of Medicare's benefits and urgently require help from the Society. It is a challenging duty for us."

In addition to offering such information and instruction, the Cancer Society conducts a broad counseling service of all matters pertaining to cancer.

A loan and gift service for cancer patients is also a feature of a Society's unit's operation. Included here are such items as dressings, sick room supplies, equipment and gifts for the comfort and recreation of the patient.

The introduction into the home of comfort items, dressings and certain other equipment lessens materially the patient's burdens and promotes a sense of cheerfulness and optimism. Loan items range from such supplies as thermometers and basins to larger items, such as wheel chairs, beds, and bedside tables. Gift items cover a wide variety of articles.

The Society also sets up transportation for cancer patients to and from their physician's offices, hospitals or clinic for diagnosis and treatment. This transportation service is a local community project carried out by the Warren County Unit, ACS.

Among the other services offered by the local unit is a homemaker service, said Mr. Donaldson. Here a mature, carefully selected volunteer or staff person with skills does light housekeeping, and assists in some of the activities of daily living. Rehabilitation also plays a key role in the overall ACS homemaker service program.

Scranton and Leader Urge Approval of Ballot Questions

Two former governors of Pennsylvania urge voters approval at the April 23rd Primary of the proposals submitted by the Constitutional Convention dealing with taxation and finance.

Former Govs. William W. Scranton and George M. Leader, who are serving as Co-Chairmen of the "Committee for 5 Yes Votes", jointly made the appeal.

Concerning Ballot Question No. 2 which deals with the Commonwealth debt limit, Gov. Leader states:

"Millions of dollars of tax money can be saved through lower interest charges if the voters approve Ballot Question Number 2 at the coming Primary."

"The unrealistic one-million-dollar debt limit set by the 1874 Constitution has been circumvented since 1946 by the creation of semi-private authorities which have borrowed money to build hospitals, college dormitories, schools, state parks and many other kinds of vitally important construction projects."

"The authorities have served Pennsylvania well, but they have been too expensive, since their borrowing has not been backed by the full faith and credit of the Commonwealth, and has therefore borne higher interest rates."

"The proposed change in the Constitution would tie in the Commonwealth's debt limit to the average amount of revenue taken in by the Commonwealth government over a five-year period. This would create a ceiling at the present time of about $2.3 billion in which the present authority debt of $1.2 billion would be included."

"Thus the new debt limit would be both realistic and fiscally sound."

Former Gov. Scranton called attention to financial benefits to local governments contained in Ballot Question No. 3 and said:

"The burden which many local governments bear by reason of large amounts of tax-exempt property will be lightened by voter approval of the proposal on Taxation submitted by the Constitutional Convention."

"Exemptions from taxation would be more clearly defined. Property owned by charitable and religious institutions as well as religious or public purposes in order to qualify for tax exemptions."

"Also contained in Ballot Question No. 3 are important provisions which make real property owned by public utilities subject to local taxation for the first time."

"Not only the communities which public utility installations are located but all communities in the State would benefit from this provision."

"Taxes on public utilities would not be collected directly by cities, boroughs or townships but the total amount subject to taxation would be distributed by the State from money delivered from the gross receipts tax on utilities."

"The new Article on Taxation would also be of great eventual benefit to the poor and elderly since it gives the Legislature the power to give them tax exemptions, provided that the local governments are reimbursed by the State for the resulting loss of revenue."

"The Taxation Article submitted by the Convention to the voters at the coming Primary Election has much to recommend it, as do the other four questions which will appear on the ballot."

State Seeks Brain Power To Tune of $1.4 Million

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP)—Are you an unrecognized scientific genius? Perhaps a second Thomas Edison?

Then Pennsylvania wants you. A new program aimed at attracting to Pennsylvania some of the best minds in the world is getting under way.

James F. Hazeltine Jr., associate director of research at Armstrong Cork Co., is one of the key men helping develop plans to carry out what Gov. Shafer calls "brainpower development."

Hazeltine and other members of the newly formed Pennsylvania Science and Engineering Foundation are seeking to promote scientific achievement.

A $1.4 million state allocation is expected to be distributed for various scientific research projects by June 1, end of the current fiscal year. The Legislature is expected to allocate as much or more for the program next year.

"Our aim is to stimulate the economy of Pennsylvania through greater development of scientific and engineering potential," Hazeltine said. "We want to create more scientific excellence in Pennsylvania."

The method, he said, is very simple—provide funds for projects that sound worthwhile and for individuals who can help.

Hazeltine said some funds, for example, might go to a university to provide adequate financial incentive to a Nobel Prize winner, a world leader in his field who otherwise might not come to Pennsylvania.

They could do research of their own, he said, and also would be a lure to young people who would like to study under them.

Hopefully, student scientists would remain in Pennsylvania to continue their work instead of going to some other part of the country.

"In a way, this is our challenge to MIT and Cal. Tech," Hazeltine said.

MIT is Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Cal. Tech is California Institute of Technology.

The young professor without a reputation, but with unusual potential, Hazeltine said, might be eligible for a grubstake from the state to provide a "head start" that should enable him to become essentially self-supporting thereafter.

Funds would also be available for distinguished lecturers, and professors, fellowships, incentive grants.

On the industry side, Hazeltine said nothing would be undertaken that would bring windfall profits to a single company. Research, he said, would be done by a group of industries and probably would be carried out at a university.

Dividends from the program would belong to the people of Pennsylvania, and knowledge obtained would be available to everybody.

Applicants for state funds, Hazeltine said, must say how they would make the new information available to the public.

There is no hard and fast method of allocating funds, he said. Preference would go to projects deemed most worthwhile for Pennsylvania.

"We feel that pollution is the most serious problem," Hazeltine said, "particularly water pollution from mine drainage."

He said an end to water pollution would benefit large areas of the state, especially the Delaware River and Susquehanna River basins.

Two Charged With Inciting To Riot

READING, Pa. (AP)—Two white men are charged here with inciting to riot for what Mayor Victor Yarnell calls "out and out baiting."

Police said they arrested the men—led by Roy E. Frankhouser of Reading, self-proclaimed head of the Ku Klux Klan in Pennsylvania, after they paraded through the business district Saturday afternoon in "Ku Klux Klan garb" and distributed literature.

Frankhouser claimed the arrests were unconstitutional and said the leaflets contained only innocuous Easter greetings and two verses of "The Old Rugged Cross," and some other slogans.

Bail was set for all at $1,000 each.

Charged besides Frankhouser were Richard F. Grim of Allentown, Charles D. Knowles of Reading, David N. Kraig of Reading, Alexander M. Fasy of Chester, Mike G. Rainey of Dover, Del., and Barry B. Ignatovich and Albert and Robert W. Howe, all of Philadelphia.

Dem. Governors Meet Monday In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Democratic National Governors Conference will meet Monday in St. Louis to discuss politics, but there was no indication the group would unite behind any of the candidates for their party's presidential nomination.

Fifteen of the nation's 24 Democratic governors have indicated they will attend. Others still were undecided Sunday whether they would be present at the caucus, the second such meeting in St. Louis in less than a year.

Gov. Harold Hughes of Iowa, chairman of the conference, called the governors together after President Johnson's unexpected announcement two weeks ago that he would not seek another term.

Although none of the candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination were invited to Monday's meeting, their representatives will be on hand.

Several of the governors probably will go to next summer's Democratic convention in Chicago as favorite sons. Others have urged their delegations to go uncommitted.

The announced candidates for the nomination are Sens. Eugene McCarthy, of Minnesota, and Robert F. Kennedy of New York. Vice President Hubert Humphrey has not announced as a candidate but is expected to reveal his intentions shortly.
